THE SNOW SHOE REGION

Sixth Installment of Historical Sketch.

A NEW SETTLEMENT

Organization of Burnside Township—The Discovery or Bituminous Coal.

COMPILED BY JAMES GILLILAND

In 1850 or 1851 John Smith, of New Jersey, purchased from the Gratzes twenty-four tracts of the Levy lands, and, in connection with his nephew, Edward Smith, erected a large mill, with two circular saws, on Miles Run, within three miles of the Susquehanna River; built plank roads on which to convey logs to the mill; constructed a railroad, with iron rail, to the summit, and there erected machinery to remove the lumber in bulk from the cars to a platform, and from thence to wagons that carried the lumber to the river.

Mr. David Rhoads the efficient superintendent of the Bellefonte and Snow Shoe Railroad, purchased an interest, and afterwards superintended the business, conducting it under the name of Smith, Rhoads & Smith. The mill was destroyed by fire some years ago, and was not rebuilt.

In 1852 Dr. James Irvin, of Milesburg, and Augustus Hylman, of Bellefonte, located near Stewart's Mills on the Karthaus road, and engaged extensively in the square timber business, in connection with merchandizing. A year or two afterward they erected a steam saw mill in the pine forest called Pine Swamp. They conveyed their sawed lumber to the river, about three-fourths, of a mile distance, in a flume (plank trough)—the first, and perhaps only, experiment of the kind tried, and it is said proved a success. Railroads having, to a great extent, taken sawed lumber off the river, it was never fully tested.

Soon after Irvin & Hylman commenced operations, the Messrs. Shucks, from Lancaster county, purchased land on the Big Moshannon, erected a steam saw mill, and manufactured lumber until their timber became exhausted.

James K. Boulk, an enterprising citizen of Cumberland county, purchased ground adjoining the Bowes farm, on the Karthaus road, built a dwelling and a storehouse, and engaged in merchandizing and the square timber business. He died several years ago, leaving a family. His sons George and Cameron were enterprising citizens, and are largely engaged in mercantile and lumber operations.

In 1856 Robert Lipton purchased from Thomas Mayes a tract of the Wallace land, a short distance from Snow Shoe village, on which he erected a steam saw mill, which he afterwards sold to the Bellefonte and Snow Shoe Railroad Company.

GERMANIA.

This is a German settlement, about a mile north of the Karthaus road, in the neighborhood of Holt's. It was commenced in the autumn of 1847 by Barnabus Fedolpher, Boston Fisher, and others of their kindred, who emigrated from Germany to Cumberland county. In the summer of 1847 they set out to seek permanent homes. They called at Moshannon Mills, then being built, and were directed to the tract of land which they purchased from the Gratzes. They divided the land among them into small tracts, as regularly laid out as the lots of a city. All are well improved. The location is a beautiful one, and there is an air of neatness and order connected with all the improvements that attracts the attention of the passer-by.

ORGANIZATION OF BURNSIDE TWP.

At April Sessions, 1857, William Stewart and others petitioned the court praying for the division of Snow Shoe township. Commissioners were appointed, who reported to August Sessions dividing the township, which report was approved nisi, and at November Sessions, there being no opposition, was confirmed. The place of voting was at the Pine Glen school house. The name was given in honor of the Hon Thomas Burnside. The line dividing it from Snow Shoe crosses the Karthaus road a short distance west of J. H. Holt's, and is bounded on the south and west by Big Moshannon Creek and the Susquehanna River, and by the adjoining county (Clinton) on the north.

BITUMINOUS COAL.

The first discovery of coal, tradition says, was made by Colonel John Holt, his son John, Samuel Askey, Charles Lucas, Baptist Lucas, and Joseph Lucas, near a spring on Askey's land, now owned by the heirs of William A. Thomas. They were passing the spring on a hunting excursion, and the outcropping of the coal attracted their attention. The seam was opened so as to get at the hard coal, and the first used in the county was taken from this place.

The commencement of mining on an extensive scale was on the Valentines & Thomas tract of the "Snow Shoe Surveys," a few rods from the site of the Indian camp. The next was on the adjoining tract of Wallace, occupied by Samuel Gunsallis, now owned by the Bellefonte and Snow Shoe Railroad Company. Thomas Mayes opened on his land about a mile east of Gunsallis.

SEPTEMBER WEDDING BELLS.

Bellefonte Man Wins Lock Haven Young Woman For His Bride.

A happy company of relatives, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mrs. Mary Stringfellow, 237 Susquehanna avenue, Monday afternoon to witness the marriage of her daughter, Margaret A., to John M. Kern, of Bellefonte. Promptly at 2 o'clock, the hour set for the ceremony, the bride and groom entered the parlor, where they were met by the bride's pastor, Rev. Amos A. Parr, who performed the ceremony, using the ring service. The happy couple then received the congratulations of their friends, after which all were invited to the dining room, where abundant refreshments were served. Besides the relatives and neighbors the following were present: Misses Lizzie and Mary Rickert and Burt Bewley, of Renovo; Miss Maude Krape, of Lamar, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stringfellow, of Flemington.

Mr. and Mrs. Kern left on the evening train for Bellefonte, where they will make their future home. They have the best wishes of their many friends for a long, happy and prosperous wedded life.—Lock Haven Democrat.

Hoisting Coal at the Anthracite Coal Mine.

To most men—such as are even engaged in other lines of engineering construction—the mechanical details of mine hoisting cannot fail to be of interest. It is here shown that they are vital to the success of the majority of coal-mining industries.

With many, the mining of coal is classed among the roughest kind of mechanical operations, in which the pick, drill and mule-car play the most prominent part—an idea which has survived the era of primitive mining operations. Modern mining, however, has been brought to a stage of engineering refinement never dreamed of by the pioneers of the industry. To the lay reader the condensed presentation of the state of the art as now conducted, even so far as it relates to the lifting of coal from its normal level to the surface, it is a revelation such, as without expert instruction, could not be gained by a tour of inspection throughout the anthracite districts. The manner of obtaining the great supply of fuel, which is so intimately related to the progress of civilization, of which supply the Pennsylvania anthracite regions are one of the most important sources of supply, will ever continue to possess an interest superior to that of many industries to which coal-getting is commercially vital. The facts given illustrate the importance of skillful engineering to mine hoisting, and serve to place in a strong light the great advancement made during the last twenty-five years by careful study and skill construction. It will be seen that even the smallest details have received attention, and that what might seem of small moment to those unfamiliar with the requirements of coal hoisting prove upon examination to be far otherwise.—R. V. Norris, in Engineering Magazine for September.

—A small note book was picked up in front of William Reasner's residence on North Thomas street this week. It looks like an engineer's note book. Owner can have same by calling at this office.

WINFIELD GREGG NOT GUILTY

Aged Man is Free from Murder Charge.

NOT MUCH EVIDENCE

Was Submitted as Court Ruled out Objectional Points—The Jury Instructed to Bring in Verdict

HELD FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY

On Friday afternoon when court opened in the McHugh murder trial, Ex-Judge Love read from several authorities in regard to the appearance of blows inflicted on bodies before and after death. Dr. Hayes was on the stand and the Judge attempted to prove by citing these authorities that Mr. McHugh died from drowning. Dr. Hayes did not think so.

On examination by Mr. Gleason Dr. Hayes stated that it took a very much less blow to kill a man who was a chronic drinker than one who was not.

Dr. Huff of Milesburg, Coroner of Centre County, was called to the stand. With Dr. Hayes he made an examination of the body of McHugh in the cemetery on April 28. His testimony corroborated that of Dr. Hayes. He could not tell what caused McHugh's death. If the blood vessels were in a weakened condition as a result of drinking it would not take as hard a blow to kill a man as if he was of temperate habits.

Undertaker Boozer testified that the body examined by Drs. Hayes and Huff on April 28th, was that of McHugh.

Ollie McHugh, a son of the dead man testified to the finding of his father's body. Pointed out on map where body was found in Moshannon Creek. The body was found, face downward in the creek, arms were raised in a defensive position. Body was taken out with iron garden rake. Three other men were with me. His eyes were half open. We were in a boat when we found the body. We floated down stream from where hat was found to where body lay. Water was two or three feet deep at this point.

Harry Shook of Bellefonte, a photographer, identified several pictures which he had taken of Moshannon Creek where body was found, also of Gregg's shanty.

Barney McHugh identified the picture of Gregg's shanty also picture of Moshannon Creek. There were several pictures of Moshannon Creek, and he identified them all. They were offered in evidence.

John Maston testified to taking body of McHugh from water. He corroborated testimony of Ollie McHugh. He pointed out the spot on the picture where the body was found.

At this time Ex-Judge Love raised the point of law that the Commonwealth had not proven that McHugh came to his death by foul play, and wanted case thrown out, Mr. Gleason argued against it and Judge Orvis decided to hear the evidence further.

Dr. Reed of Houtzdale testified to having examined the body. The face was not distorted. No water in lungs nor froth in mouth. He examined body in a room of McHugh's home the day after the body was found. There was a poor light in the room when I made the examination. Only mark of a bruise that I found was on left ear. There was no marks of violence that I could discover on the body that would have caused death.

Judge Orvis decided at this point that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury.

Mrs. Anne McHugh was called and by her testimony the Commonwealth tried to prove a conspiracy between the defendant and Chas. and Howard Stewart to kill and conceal the body of McHugh. The Stewarts are in jail awaiting trial. The defense objected strenuously to bringing the Stewart's into this case. Judge Orvis finally decided that the Commonwealth should put in writing what they desired to prove and he would consider the matter.

Court then adjourned until 8:30 Saturday morning.

On Saturday morning Court called at 8:30 with Judge Orvis presiding. The trial of Winfield Gregg was immediately taken up. During the night one of the jurors was quite ill and the services of a Doctor was necessary. He was in his seat however when Court called.

Three quarters of an hour was taken up by the lawyers in arguing the question of conspiracy, and the admission of evidence along the line. Judge Orvis finally ordered the Commonwealth to proceed leaving out the declaration of the Stewarts after the crime was committed.

Mrs. McHugh took the stand and identified the watch taken from her husband's body. It had stopped it is supposed at the exact moment the body entered the water.

The watch was also identified by Barney McHugh.

James Dix was called, live in Rush township; am married; was in Gregg's shanty on night of April 11th at 7.30. The men in the shanty were Winfield Gregg, Michael McHugh, Chas. and Howard Stewart.

On cross-examination he said the men were drunk, he saw them take a drink of whiskey.

Peter Offit called; live in Rush township am 19 years of age; Live a mile from Osceola town; was in Osceola on night of April 11, left Osceola 10 minutes of 11 on night of April 11. Passed Gregg's shanty at 11 o'clock. The Commonwealth was compelled to put in writing what they expected to prove by this witness. The defense objected to the testimony and after much delay the Court sustained the objection and ruled the evidence out.

At this point it became very evident that the bottom had fallen out of the Commonwealth case and after considerable sparring back and forth between the lawyers Judge Orvis instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of "Not Guilty" which they accordingly did. The old man Gregg received the verdict very calmly. The charge of assault and battery still hangs over him and Commonwealth insisted on holding him on this charge so he was remanded back to jail in default of bail.

Just as the case ended juryman William Bodle, of Spring township, who was sick Friday night, fainted away and was carried from the court room.

The trial of Winfield Gregg, who with Chas. and Howard Stewart were charged with causing the death of Michael McHugh on the night of April 11th last, near Sandy Ridge, was called Thursday afternoon about 3 o'clock. It was decided to try Gregg first and if a case could be made out against him the trial of the other two would follow immediately. There was an imposing array of legal talent on both sides. The prosecution being conducted by District Attorney W. G. Runkle and James A. Gleason, of Houtzdale. The defendants interests were being ably taken care of by Ex-Judge John G. Love, Col. E. R. Chambers and J. A. B. Miller of Bellefonte and Geo. W. Zeigler of Philipsburg.

Winfield Gregg was called to the bar and entered a plea of "not guilty." He is 65 years of age and a veteran of the civil war. He seemed to feel his position keenly. His home was at Sandy Ridge.

The jury panel was almost exhausted before the twelve men were secured and the last man entered the box this morning.

Friday morning soon after opening court the District Attorney made the opening address. He outlined the case for the prosecution and told what they expected to prove.

The jury selected is as follows: Adam Fisher, farmer, Boggs twp; James A. Decker, butcher, Ferguson twp; W. A. Bodle, farmer, Spring twp; John J. Osman, farmer, College twp; W. H. Comley, mechanic, Unionville; W. C. Kline, shoemaker, State College; Curtis Meyer, laborer, College twp; F. M. Pletcher, teacher, Liberty twp, Michael Heaton, farmer, Boggs twp; A. J. Johnson, carpenter, Worth twp; Andrew Shook, gentleman, Rush twp; Michael Woomer, stone mason State College.

Mrs. Anne McHugh widow of the dead man and his son Barney were in court. The latter is the prosecutor in the case.

There are about fifty witnesses called in the case.

The first witness called was John Quim of Houtzdale, a civil engineer. He had a plan showing Winfield Gregg's shanty at Sandy Ridge, the scene of the murder and the country thereabouts. The map was offered in evidence and placed where the jury could plainly see it. Mr. Gleason conducted the examination. It was quite lengthy and described the surrounding country very minutely. The scene of the tragedy is just across the line from Clearfield county and near Sandy Ridge. It is a very hilly and rough country.

There is a thick undergrowth of brushes in the vicinity. Survey for map was made July 24th 1905. A wagon road passes through here, also Moshannon Creek. Where McHugh lived was indi-

AN OPEN LETTER.

(Appeal)

I. To the Management of the Centre County Fair.

II. To the officers of the Business Men's Picnic.

III. To the officers of the annual Granger's Picnic.

We, as citizens, having the welfare of the community at heart, and mindful of forces which are admittedly inimical to a high standard of National morality—do hereby make a public appeal to the president, officers and committeemen having in charge the sale and granting of privileges at the coming Fair at the Granger's picnic and the Business Men's picnic next year. That they restrict and prohibit all gambling devices of whatever kind, and also see to it that betting at the horse racing be strictly excluded.

It is a matter of common knowledge and sad comment that the condition at Saratoga and in a lesser degree at other race tracks and County Fairs throughout the country have been a National disgrace and a menace to decency of manners, common thrift and average morality. The youthful and the ignorant are without question contaminated and corrupted by the prevalence of the spirit and practice of gambling in all forms often adroitly contrived so as to avoid the letter of the law, but common and equal in their effects. Games not of educative skill and sport but of debilitating hazard and chance.

The Mayor of Cleveland, famous for right doing and fearless decision, has, this summer, prohibited such abuses at the Grand Circuit of Ohio and in our own State similar measures have been taken by State and county officials to the lasting credit and fair fame of the locality. May we not expect as much from the officers in charge of our own local events.

Let us, so far as we can, protect the youthful, the ignorant and the vicious, who are so quickly led astray, from the too easy employment of the worser activities of their nature and from the formation of habits which are not profitable to themselves, the community or the Nation, but tend to disintegrate thrift, honesty, respectability and the moral health of society.

21st Annual Convention of the W. C. T. U.

The county convention closed on Saturday afternoon. It was one of the most helpful, inspiring conventions. Mrs. Cora Seberry's talk to mothers and teachers during the morning session was one every mother and teacher should have heard; it dealt with very plain subjects and many mothers need more light on these to help them guard their children against impurity and evil associations. One cause of so many failures and misstepe in the lives of young girls as well as boys, is first from this source. The false modesty of the mother who does not talk with and properly warn her daughters against temptations which will meet them is realized when too late in many instances. What of the father? Is a mother any more responsible in the sight of God than the father? Tell your children the truth.

The W. C. T. U. visitors to the county convention were more than hospitably entertained. They were welcomed as members of one great family and "blest is the tie that binds" the hearts of the "White Ribboners." The M. E. church, where the convention met, was beautifully decorated and a fine program of music under the able leadership of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Eddy, opened the evening meeting. It was a grand success and all enjoyed it.

Quietly Wedded.

On Thursday at ten o'clock a. m. August 31, Mr. Jacob S. Williams and Miss Hannah Newman, both of Port Matilda, were quietly married at the parsonage of the Baptist church Milesburg by pastor A. C. Lathrop. They are both well known and highly esteemed young people and their many friends will be glad to congratulate them upon their return from a brief wedding trip to Altoona, South Fork and other places. May they have many years of happy wedded life.

A FIERCE TORNADO!

Struck Part of Carbondale Wednesday Night.

NO FATALITIES

And No One Was Seriously Injured—The Thrilling Experience of One Family.

CURIOUS PRANKS OF THE WIND,

Scranton, August 31.—A tornado struck the northern part of Carbondale at 8:50 Wednesday night and demolished a score of houses, barns and railroad cars, but fortunately caused no fatalities.

The storm came from the west and whirled towards the east, having a path of 200 feet. Its centre had the appearance of a funnel shaped cloud, not black but luminous. There was no accompaniment of lightning, thunder or rain and the stars were shining immediately before and after it passed. A peculiarity of its effects was that adjoining buildings were blown in diametrically opposite directions.

William Pope, his wife and two children of Green street, had the most thrilling experience thus far related. Their home was picked up by the wind and after being carried forty feet was hurled against the residence of Mrs. Wm. Clune. The Pope house was completely demolished, yet no one was severely injured.

Three dwellings were totally destroyed; ten were overturned or carried completely off their foundations and fully fifty were more or less damaged. Two cabooses in the Delaware and Hudson yards were demolished and pieces of the wreckage carried 600 feet. Six freight cars on an adjoining track were overturned and the roof of one of the freight cars was found half a mile away.

It was impossible to find anyone who had been seriously injured, but scarcely anyone met with, who was in the affected territory, escaped without some slight hurt.

The pranks of the storm seem almost incredible. A barn was blown away and a cow which it housed, was left unharmed, lying on the floor, calmly chewing her cud. A horse was found bruised and maimed on the porch of its owner's residence, 200 feet from the demolished barn in which it had been stabled. A six inch beam which came from no one knows where, passed through a door of a residence, thence through the ground floor and then passed into the ground for a distance of 3 feet. A carpet was blown from a floor and landed in a lump in a sink. This was the only damage done in this house.

In the residence of Lawrence Melvin, on Forty-second street, the clock door was blown open and the pendulum carried away. The clock was stopped at 8:50. The Erie dispatchers heard the rumbling approach of the storm and rushing to the windows thinking to see a runaway train approach. They saw the roof of the office sailing away before they could withdraw their heads.

Mamas to Boycott Cigarette Using Boys.

Cigarette smoking young men are to be boycotted by the Media mothers, according to reports emanating from social circles. The reason for this decision is that many girls have acquired the habit, much to the vexation of their mamas, from associating with the boy smokers.

This would never have been known but for an incident which happened last week. John Lewis, a farmer, of stolid Quaker descent, was walking along Ridley creek, near this borough, a few days ago, when he was attracted by women's voices from a dark and shady nook along the stream.

He tip-toed to the place and, peering through the bushes, saw three pretty young girls sitting on a beam, which extended over the water, and to his great surprise two of them were smoking cigarettes.

As he stood there, the third, who had refused to partake of the sport up to this time, accepted a proffered weed.

She struck a match, took a long draw coughed a little, and fell in. Lewis was quick to the rescue and as he dragged her up the bank she still held the cigarette in her mouth.

The girls would never have told it but such proceedings shocked Lewis, and he spread the news.

Editor Finds Child's Dead Body in Creek

Last Friday afternoon J. S. Johnson, editor of the Driftwood Gazette, took his fishing tackle and went down to fish the riffles in Sinnemahoning creek, a short distance east of the P. & E. railroad station at that place. At the first cast and while watching the line drift down the stream his eyes fell upon an object which sent the cold chills coursing up and down his spinal column. Six feet from the shore was a fully clothed baby, face down, its clothes caught on a rock, which was about six inches under water. Dr. Beale made an examination and testified that the child had lived at least three weeks before being thrown into the water, and that the whole side of the skull was crushed. It is possible that the child was murdered and then thrown into the stream, and the jury's verdict is that the child came to his death from causes unknown to the jury.

The Up to Date Bunny

One day Mr. Rabbit was loping around the woods, looking for whatever might satisfy his hopeless appetite, when he espied a large trap set by Mr. Man. He walked up cautiously and inspected it. Inside was a luscious looking chestnut. Mr. Rabbit's mouth watered, but being an up to date rabbit he sat on his haunches and considered.

"Huh!" said he. "That sort of thing is played out. Might have fooled my grandaddy, but he's got to play a foxier game than this to catch me.

"Wonder how I'll get that chestnut, though."

It didn't take him long. In a moment he was off on a trot to Mr. Man's cabin in the woods and banging on his back door.

"Ho, Mr. Man, come out here!"

Mr. Man stuck his head out.

"What yer want?" he asked.

"Please, Mr. Man, give me a brick."

"What yer want with a brick?"

"Oh, I'm tired of life and want to die. Earth has no joys for me more. I'll tie the brick around my neck and jump in the pond. You'll never be troubled with me again."

Of course Mr. Man wanted to get rid of Mr. Rabbit, as he had done so much harm about the place, so he gave him the brick.

Mr. Rabbit thanked him sadly and started for the pond.

"Now watch me," he grinned, when he got back to where the trap stood. Saying which he tied the brick on to the other end of the lever that held the trapdoor and quietly got his chestnut out without harm. On the inside of the trap next morning Mr. Man found a note which read: "Mr. Man, you are a chestnut."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE ROOSTER FINDS THE MOON

Because he had eaten too much supper a rooster one night was unable to sleep, and he just had to sit up on the roost and gaze out through the cracks in the hen house roof at the stars while all the rest of his family slept and snored.

He thought the stars were very wonderful, and the moon seemed marvelous.

The next day as he was crossing a field he came across a ball—one of those fancy colored bouncing balls that children love to play with. Now, Mr. Rooster had never seen one of them before, and he did not know what it was.

"This must be the moon that I saw last night," he said finally. "I wonder what it is doing down here instead of being up in the sky? It is very beautiful, it is true, but I would like to see it shine as it did last night. I suppose it doesn't shine during the day, so I'll wait until night and see it."

So Mr. Rooster sat down by the ball and waited. The sun went down, and it grew dark, and black clouds hid the stars and all the sky, but still the ball would not shine.

"It is very strange," declared the rooster as he sat and waited.

All the other chickens had gone to roost hours before, but still the rooster waited and watched.

Then the wind began to blow and the thunder to roll and the lightning to flash, and the first thing Mr. Rooster knew it was raining in torrents and he was soaked to the skin and most frightened out of his wits.

"I'll save the moon," he cried, and he grabbed up the ball and tried to run with it. When he reached the hen house door, the rain had stopped and Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

The Innocent Elephant

Jumbo was so innocent, so guileless and unsuspecting that if you told him his tail was on in front he would get mixed and be tempted to believe it. He was also absentminded.

"Why," said the monkey, "the other day I told him that he was a fire engine and that his trunk was the hose, and he never knew the difference and squirted water all over the place till the keeper came and pounded him."

"Let's have some fun with him now," suggested the parrot.

"By the way," said Jumbo absently, "who is that peculiar looking fellow with the straw sticking out of his chin, by the post there?"

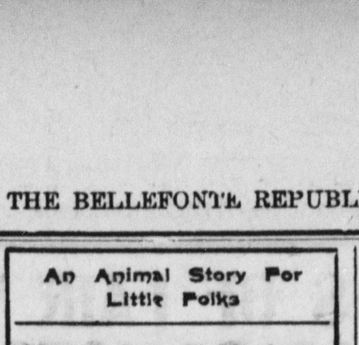
"Why, that's a 'Hey, Rube,'" said the parrot.

"A hay Rube?" asked Jumbo.

"Yes, a 'Hey, Rube.' If you'd been in the circus longer you'd have known what a 'Hey, Rube,' is."

"Is it good to eat?" queried the innocent one.

"Most assuredly," said the monkey.



AROUND THE TENT HE TORE.

"He ought to be good," thought Jumbo, "if he's hay."

He looked longingly at the jay with the grassy whiskers.

"When no one is looking I will eat him," he said.

By and by the chance came. Jumbo stole up close to the farmer, who was looking intently at the lady bareback rider. Reaching out his long trunk, he wound it about the "Hey, Rube," threw back his big head, opened his little mouth and dropped the astonished "Rube" into it.

But, oh, how different it seemed from the hay he had been used to! It kicked and struggled; it hurt his jaws; it choked him. He felt as the whale must when he had Jonah inside. He must get rid of it at once.

Around the tent he tore, looking for a way out, while the feet of his novel dinner dangled from his lips, and the people scrambled to get out of the way. After a deal of striving he broke through the tent and managed to cough his unwilling meal out on the grassy sod.

He never heard the end of his mistake. All of which shows, Bill, that there are different meanings to the same word.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Wall Street Way.

Jobson—You bought the stock on your broker's advice, didn't you? Dobson—Yes; he gave me four excellent reasons why it should go up. Jobson—What has he to say now? Dobson—He has given me four equally good reasons why it went down.

Lurking Danger.

A farmer who was much troubled by trespassers during the nutting season consulted with a botanical friend. The botanist furnished him with the technical name of the hazel, and the farmer placed the following notice at conspicuous points about his premises:

"Trespassers take warning! All persons entering this wood do so at their own risk, for, although common snakes are not often found, the Corylus avellana abounds everywhere about here and never gives warning of its presence."

The place was unmolested that year, and the farmer gathered his crop in peace.

A Roomy Hotel.

A story is being told in Athens of an American woman who visited Greece on a cruise of the Mediterranean. When she entered the train at the Piraeus in order to reach the city she was observed by a fellow traveler to be visibly distusbed and was asked to explain the reason for her distress. "Oh," she replied, "I've been wondering what we shall do. I hear we shan't be able to get rooms at the Acropolis, and I don't know the name of any other hotel."

Sun Parlor For Baby.

Sunning the baby is the latest thing in baby culture. No household is too poor to possess one of these patent adjustable sun parlors.

They are made of some kind of hard wood and built by the carpenter to extend beyond the window. The top and sides of the little platform are covered with glass, and strips of carpet are laid on the floor to stop up any cracks there may be. No matter how fiercely the winds may blow or how low the thermometer may sink, the sun parlor is always ready for the baby.

A pillow is placed on the carpeted floor; then the baby is warmly dressed and well covered for its morning or afternoon nap. Mothers who have tried this method of sunning the baby are boasting of the gain in weight and health and have the proud satisfaction of knowing they are strictly up to date.—Philadelphia Record.

A plant of alfalfa ten feet from root to tip was grown on the Colorado desert from the seed in seven months under irrigation.

Just commenced in the New York Family Story paper

A Modern Bluebeard

or the adventures of a Female Sherlock Holmes a realistic romance founded on fact by Fanny May. You who have been reading the daily papers can easily imagine how the thought came to the author's mind to write this story. Though purely a romance, many of its most sensational and dramatic scenes are based on fact. It is a startling expose of a wicked man's wiles. This realistic romance begins in No. 1644 of THE NEW YORK FAMILY STORY PAPER

A CLEAN-CUT ISSUE

Shall a Bryanite Have Custody of the Funds of the State?

PENNSYLVANIANS TO VOTE NO

"Fighting Jack" Robinson, the Breezy Delaware County Editor, Unmasks Free Silverite Berry.

[Special Correspondence.]
Philadelphia, Sept. 5.

Every day brings fresh evidence of the enthusiastic interest being taken in the Republican campaign in Pennsylvania.

The voters of the state are alive to the main issue involved and they are going to act accordingly.

Shall a Bryanite be given custody of the funds of Republican Pennsylvania?

Colonel Wesley R. Andrews, chairman of the Republican state committee, finds the headquarters thronged daily with callers coming from all sections of the state, and they all bring the same report, that there is Republican victory in the air.

"Fighting Jack" Speaks Out.

Former Congressman Robinson, of Delaware county, "Fighting Jack," as he is familiarly known, presents the issue in this campaign very clearly and concisely in his Media Ledger, in which among other things he says:

"The office of state treasurer is one of the most important to be filled in the commonwealth.

"State lines are drawn just as national lines were drawn last year between Parker and Roosevelt, and the latter won out in a fight where necessarily partisanship had to be considered and party affiliation was a crucial test.

"So it is neither plausible nor rational from a Republican viewpoint to put forward the cry of 'independence,' and ask that party lines be obliterated when the conduct of the finances of the state is the question at issue.

"Mr. Berry's well known and often avowed advocacy of free silver, together with his ardent Prohibitionism, makes him a subject dangerous to elect over an able and clean man like Hon J. Lee Plummer, of Blair county.

"A Republican who can be cajoled or bamboozled by a cry of non-partisanship or independence to cast aside his convictions in so vital a canvass must indeed be a weak and simple-minded voter.

Berry As a Bryanite.

"William H. Berry is an example of the politics pushed to the extreme limit by William Jennings Bryan, and he has never resented any of the heresies he so persistently put to the fore in the congressional and presidential campaigns of 1896 and 1900. Indeed, as late as last January Candidate Berry at a social gathering of the Burns Club in Chester—the last place one would have expected a political speech—elaborated his singular views of finances. If such things be done in the green, what will he not do in the dry and with full power and the credit of the commonwealth at his back—if such a thing could occur in this staunch Republican stronghold of Pennsylvania—those who knew Berry would look for almost any reactionary and revolutionary manipulation of the credit and the funds, now so deservedly high, of this great state.

"It would, indeed, be a great calamity to have Berry as state treasurer, and the announcement go out over all the United States that the doctrines of Bryan and not McKinley are in the ascendant in the Keystone State, the banner Republican fortress.

Should Stand Pat.

"Let every Republican, therefore, 'stand pat' on the question of finance and take no steps backward.

"If the prosperity we now enjoy as a nation and the high credit the commonwealth of Pennsylvania now obtains be the result of Republican success—as it unquestionably is—would not a vote for Berry be a stultification of the record made, and would it not be a menace to good financial government to defeat an honest money candidate, an honest candidate and representing an honest party by an avowed and notorious advocate of Bryanism and depreciated standards?

"This is the state of all states in the union where such a dangerous experiment should not be essayed.

"We firmly believe that there are not one thousand Republicans in this commonwealth who, if they perused the speeches of William H. Berry in the memorable campaign of 1896 and who analyzed these radical statements, would ever think of casting a ballot against his own party, which has a typical candidate.

"No fake issue should obscure the field of political vision, and of all years and of all states this one of Pennsylvania is the last, and should be the last, to adopt a policy and a candidate so radically opposed to all that has been so successfully advanced and firmly secured by the party in the past.

"Standing in the ancient ways, leaving aside even the suspicion that she should reverse her splendid financial record, remembering the victories won in both state and nation over just such dangerous political quacks and doctrinaires as Bryan and Berry, we predict that as the campaign unfolds and the artfulness of the political games against our party are exposed, this Keystone State will give a larger majority this off year than she ever did in any such year before."

Wants No Extra Session.

The man tilling the soil is not much interested in personal registration now, and don't want the state to go to a heavy expense at this time to satisfy the whims of a few reformers. Personal registration can easily wait until the legislature again meets in regular session.—Hazleton Sentinel

Catarrh and Catarrhal Diseases Make Invalids of More Women Than All Other Ailments Combined.

Suffered Long With Catarrh.

Miss Clara Case, 715 9th street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I can think of no event in my life that fills me with more gratitude and at the same time a sense of future security, as a cure after long suffering from catarrh, brought about by using Peruna as directed. It has completely cured me."—Clara Case.

Entire System Toned by Pe-ru-na.

Miss Mary Bennett, 2640 Addison Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"A few months ago I contracted a cold by getting my feet wet, and although I used the usual remedies I could not shake it off.

"I finally took Peruna. In a week I was better. After several weeks I succeeded in ridding myself of any trace of a cold, and besides the medicine had toned up my system so that I felt splendid."—Mary Bennett.

Physicians Had Given Up the Case—Now Entirely Well.

Miss Gertrude Linford, Vice President Parkside Whist Club and teacher of Whist, 231 Niagara street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna has effectually cured me after physicians had practically given up my case.

"For a long time I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys, had a weakness and pain in the back, lost flesh rapidly, my feet were swollen, my face was puffed under the eyes and I had a waxy sallowness of the skin.

"I took Peruna for some time and am entirely well. I cannot endorse Peruna too strongly."—Gertrude Linford.

If you suffer from catarrh in any form, do not delay. Take Peruna at once. Delays are dangerous.

Miss Nalley's Story—Short, But Interesting to Every Woman.

Miss Addie Nalley, 127 D street, S. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"A cough, the grip, catarrh of the meanest kind—all sorts of remedies, home, patent and prescribed by doctors, and no relief,—that tells my story, a story of suffering and distress that lasted four years.

"Then—three bottles of Peruna—catarrh gone, appetite and strength returned—a happy woman, and none more grateful for the blessing of health—that is what Peruna has done for me."—Addie Nalley.

Shakespeare's "King Richard the Third."

This tragedy of the immortal bard is promised a splendid representation at Garman's opera house on Friday, Sept. 8, by John Griffith and a specially selected company. An interesting reminiscence of Shakespeare exists in an old churchyard at Petersburg, Virginia. There is still decipherable on a crumbling tombstone the epitaph of a "Professor of Chyrurgery," of 1611, or thereabouts, at the foot of which is inscribed "One of the Pall-bearers of William Shakespeare, of Avon," who, it is evident, emigrated to Virginia in those early days and accounted it an honor to be recorded after death as one of the great author's pall-bearers, whose works are today too seldom represented. At the present time there is probably no actor on the American or any other stage so eminently fitted as John Griffith for "King Richard," and this opinion has been heartily endorsed by the leading journals of America during his successful tours. Fireproof scenery for the entire production is carried, and electrical effects are introduced to enhance the weird effects and apparitions in the Tent and Battle Scenes at Bosworth Field.

Mrs. Laura E. Fetzer Eckley.

This esteemed christian woman went to her rest after months of agonizing suffering on August 31st, 1905, aged 45 years, 2 months and 9 days. Her death occurred in her home at Milesburg where the family have resided since moving from Marsh Creek several years ago. Early in life she was led to accept Christ as her Saviour and united with the Milesburg Baptist church, she continued in the fellowship of this church her entire life and was always interested in the cause of Christ. Her death was of a triumphant nature. She is survived by her husband, William Eckley, two daughters, Mrs. Ollie Shawley and Mrs. Tessie Hipple, both of Milesburg, her mother Mrs. Hannah Fetzer, three brothers, William, Oscar and Orvis and four sisters, Mrs. Alice Poorman, Mrs. Nettie Malone, Mrs. Hattie Dankle and Miss Myrtie Fetzer, all of whom are living in the vicinity of Marsh Creek. A number of these are ill with typhoid fever and could not attend the funeral. Services were held at the Advent church on Sunday Sept. 3, at 3 p. m. conducted by pastor A. C. Lathrop, assisted by pastors Zeigler and Bingham. These services were attended by almost the entire community. Interment was made in the adjoining cemetery.

Winfield Gregg not Guilty.

cated on the map. Points where body of McHugh was found in Moshannon Creek and where his hat was found were also located. The shanty of Gregg was located between where the body was found and McHugh's home.

Cross examination by E. R. Chambers Esq. Water in creek was very low when survey was made; not over two feet deep.

Barney McHugh was the next witness called, Live in Rush twp, Centre county, married, Age 33; son of Michael McHugh Am a miner, lived in Osceola last April when father was killed. About 12 miles from where father lived. Last time I saw him was in Osceola on the night of April 10. Did not see him on 11th. On morning of 12th met Mr. Gregg defendant, He said "don't you know your father is lost," I said it can't be he's lost. Gregg said "you will not find him this time." Gregg left me quickly. I went to father's house and mother said father's hat had been found. I started to hunt father. Went to Gregg's shanty, it was locked. Found John Fitzgerald and John Monson and started on to father.

Searched on the ground between shanty and bridge. Met Mr. Gregg near Berwindwhite car shops. He said "I am sorry to tell you that you will never find your father alive. "Look for him east of shanty." Found father's body about 4:30 p. m. April 12 in Moshannon creek on Centre county side. Water where hat was found by mother was about 8 or 10 inches deep. I waded in water where father is said to have been taken in.

Cross-examined by Col. Chambers. Last saw him alive on April 10. Did not know his physical condition at that time. He was half a square away from him. This was two days before body was found. He was in good condition the last time I talked to him. The second time I saw Gregg he took me to his shanty. We took a drink out of bottle. Then continued search for my father. John Monson and Patrick Hoy found body at 4:30 on 12th and brought him out to the bank. There was a large crowd present when body was found. There were marks on body. Three or four bruises on forehead.

Mrs. Anna McHugh, widow of Michael McHugh, was then called to the stand, I reside in Rush Twp, Centre county. Married 32 years. Have five children. My husband drank when he had money. Followed mining all his life. Always made a living for his family and me. Three sons married. I live with oldest son. Husband worked in mines on April 11 from 7 a. m. until 3:30. Came home dressed. Went to blacksmith shop to sharpen pick. Blacksmith shop faces Gregge shanty. Saw husband leave house and go to shop near Gregge shanty. Did not see him again until he was brought a corpse at 8 p. m. April 12. I searched for him all day on 12. I first went straight to Gregge door He was making a fire. He said he had not seen McHugh since 10 p. m. Tuesday night. At this point the defense objected to a certain line which the testimony was taking. The court decided that prosecution should put in writing what they expected to prove. After argument prosecution dismissed Mrs. McHugh for the present and called John Boozer. Reside at Osceola. Am an undertaker. Saw McHugh alive on Monday April 10. On night of 12th about 9 o'clock was sent for to take charge of body. When I arrived there the body was on a stretcher on bank of creek. Was taken to his residence. Hands were extended and had nothing in them. Could not see marks on body that night. On 13th I embalmed him Found no water in lungs. Small scrape on forehead. A mark on ear like the scratch of a nail. A cut on the other ear also. Buried on Saturday,

Cross-examined by Mr. Chambers; he said he saw him Monday and he was under the influence of whiskey. The marks on the body were very slight.

Dr. R. G. H. Hayes was then called Reside in Bellefonte where I practice medicine. Graduate of Jefferson and have practiced 20 years. Held post-mortem on body of Mr. McHugh in cemetery on 28th of April. Coroner Huff and I made the examination. There were three or four abrasions on right side of face. Tube of left ear was injured, also right ear Also abrasion over the right eye. Opened the head of McHugh. The mark over right eye was made before death from the indications I found. Dr. Hayes explained why he thought blow was inflicted before death. There were post-mortem discolorations on the body. Lungs were in healthy condition. Contained air but no water There were no congestion of stomach or lungs as there would have been had he drowned. There were no evidence of drowning about body. I do not think he drowned.

Cross-examined by Ex-Judge Love. The wound over the eye was a round, irregular abrasion. The abrasions on cheek were not deep. I have held 3 or 4 post-mortem examinations where death resulted from drowning. His stomach indicated an excessive use of liquors.

Unionville.

The 21st annual convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Centre county was held in Milesburg in the M. E. church Aug. 31st and Sept 1st. The officers were all in their places and a good representation from all the local unions except one. The church was well decorated with cut flowers, potted plants and evergreens. The attendance was good at most all the sessions and a full program was well carried out. The entertainment was more and all that could be asked for; many thanks to the Milesburg ladies for their kind hospitality.

The ministers of the town were very cordial and assisted in every possible way. The choir of the M. E. church favored us with excellent music, also the juniors of the other churches sang their temperance songs which were highly appreciated.

Many of the different lines of work were discussed very profitably and reports of work done given by the superintendent of these departments; likewise reports of work given by the local unions and by separate individuals. Amongst these were "Scientific Temperance Instruction," "Mothers Meetings," "Loyal Legions," "Temperance Light Bearers," "Flower Mission," "Prison and Jail Work," "Work Amongst Railroaders," "Crusade Against License," "Social Purity" and many others of equal importance; Mrs Wright of Philadelphia was with us adding inspiration; she was a former resident of Milesburg.

A few of our valuable members were absent from ill health, and were sorely missed. Among those were Miss Clara Valentine and Mrs J D Mitchel of Bellefonte and Mrs Crose of Philipsburg.

The convention speaker was Mrs Seaberry of New York City, national lecturer and organizer; she lectured on Thursday evening to a full house and held the attention of her audience to the close.

Topic, "There's Something in the Way" Mrs Seaberry is also an elocutionist and highly entertained her audience reciting selections bearing on her subject; she enumerated different obstacles that stand in the way of the Temperance Reform fully explained each and prescribed a remedy for each one.

Some of these were "The injudicious living and dressing of many women," who should be the house makers. "The Use of Patent Medicines" which are a large per cent. alcohol.

"Cider Drinking," which makes the worst kind of drunkards and indifference on the part of the people; that must be overcome. The speaker closed with reciting the piece entitled "The Chimes of the Bells." Mrs Seaberry is a thoroughly consecrated woman and is depriving herself of the comforts of her home to go where the Lord wants her to go and to say what he wants her to say for the sake of the cause which she represents. Our convention closed on Friday p m. with the same officers re-elected and a general feeling that a series of meetings had been held that would have their effect in uplifting and helping all who availed themselves of the opportunity to attend them. We meet in Philipsburg next year nothing preventing.

Committee Want Correct Names of Centre County Soldiers.

In order to secure absolute accuracy in the names and spelling thereof on our soldiers' monument, we will publish from time to time the lists of certain companies so as to enable those who are interested to suggest changes in initials or spelling, and also to suggest the names of any persons who may have been omitted from the rolls. This is the last opportunity which will be given to our people and to the survivors or friends of deceased soldiers who served from Centre county to have these names corrected. The Committee, therefore, appeals very earnestly to all who are interested in the subject to carefully scan all the names to ascertain 1st, whether any have been omitted; and 2nd, whether the names of those already contained in the rolls are properly spelled.

It is also very important that the names of soldiers who enlisted in organizations outside of the county or State should be secured, in order that they may find their place among the nation's defenders upon the monument. This is perhaps the most important thing which the Committee has in charge, the organization from our own county being already well known. If, therefore, any person, in or out of the county, has knowledge of a citizen of Centre county who enlisted in organizations outside of the county and State, it is especially important that their names should be ascertained, so that they may find a place among those who enlisted at home.

Any communications in regard to these names addressed to Gen. John I Curtin or William H. Musser, Bellefonte, will receive prompt attention.

Bates, in his History of the Pennsylvania Volunteers, states that the 161st Regiment of the line (16th Cavalry) commanded by Col. J. Irvin Gregg, of Centre county, was recruited in part in Centre county. No soldiers from that regiment have so far been found. Are there any surviving members of it in this county or are there any friends of deceased member, who can give the names of men from Centre county who enlisted in that regiment? So far the compilers of the names for the monument have not been able to find any.

It is important that the names of any men from this county who were in that regiment should be furnished immediately either to Gen. Curtin or 'Squire Musser.

PENROSE AND KNOX

They Stand Well With the President, and Are Working in Harmony.

Washington, July 13.—Members of the Pennsylvania official colony here are still talking about the conference which Senator Knox held with President Roosevelt last week at Oyster Bay. There is no doubt of the fact that Senator Knox is one of the closest men in the country to the president. Roosevelt has great respect for his judgment and it is known that questions of the highest importance were discussed at this conference.

Pennsylvania's two United States senators stand well with the president, and they are working in absolute harmony in looking after the interests of their constituents in the Keystone state.

Senator Penrose, in his last visit to the White House, which was just before the Roosevelt family left on their summer vacation, had a very satisfactory talk with the president, and the latter showed his appreciation of the cordial support of the senior senator from Pennsylvania by giving him two important consular appointments that very day.

One of these places went to Maxwell Kennedy Moorehead, of Pittsburg, who was appointed consul to a desirable post in Canada, and the other was landed by B. F. Chase, former chairman of the Clearfield county Republican committee, who goes to Catania, Italy.

Probably in no other state in the union do the two United States senators work in greater harmony than do Senators Penrose and Knox.

Every now and then reports to the contrary emanate from Philadelphia, but they are absolutely unfounded.

Senator Knox in his recent interview in Pittsburg showed that he is in full sympathy with the Republican organization in Pennsylvania and that he believes that the Republican party is quite competent to manage its own affairs without seeking advice or assistance from Democrats or others who are not good Republicans.

Judge Stewart's Popularity.

"Governor Pennypacker's appointment of Judge John Stewart, of Franklin county, to the vacancy on the state supreme bench gave universal satisfaction to all who have the best interests of the commonwealth at heart," declares the editor of the Meadville (Pa.) Gazette. "Judge Stewart is without doubt one of the very best lawyers in the state. For 17 years he has filled the office of president judge of Franklin county, and his decisions have been reversed by the supreme court a fewer number of times than those of any other common pleas judge in the state. He is a veteran of the civil war, where he served in the 126th regiment, P. V. I. He stands for all that is best in Republicanism, and will receive the full party vote should he be nominated for the full term, as he undoubtedly will be."

Woman's Wisdom.

Women are the inheritors of the oldest, most universal human wisdom. They have more sense than men, for the simple reason that a man has to be a specialist, and a specialist has to be a fanatic. The normal man all over the world is a hunter or a fisher or a banker or a man of letters or some silly thing. If so, he has to be a wise hunter or a wise banker. But nobody with the smallest knowledge of professional life would ever expect him to be a wise man. But his wife has to be a wise woman. She has to have an eye on everything.—G. K. Chesterton in London Daily News.

A GOOD NIGHT'S REST

"Speak for it!" she cried to doggie,
For she knew in her little heart,
That German Syrup, home's great treasure,
Could health and joy impart.

¶The greatest tonic on earth is a good night's rest. Restless nights and the terrible exhaustion of a hacking cough are dread dangers of the poor consumptive. ¶But why this fear of the night when a few doses of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup will insure refreshing sleep, entirely free from cough or night sweat? Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by taking German Syrup.

¶We know by the experience of over thirty-five years that one 75-cent bottle of German Syrup will speedily relieve or cure the worst coughs, colds, bronchial or lung troubles—and that, even in bad cases of consumption, one large bottle of German Syrup will work wonders. ¶Two sizes, 25c and 75c. STARVED OUT.

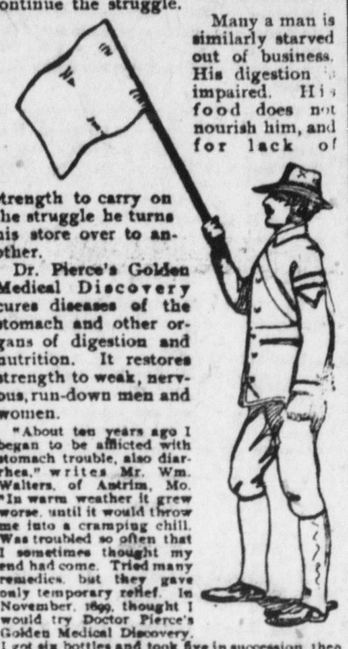
Many a garrison has been forced to give up the fight and hang out the white flag of surrender, when lack of food has weakened the men past all power to continue the struggle.



Many a man is similarly starved out of business. His digestion is impaired. His food does not nourish him, and for lack of strength to carry on the struggle he turns his store over to another.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores strength to weak, nervous, run-down men and women.

"About ten years ago I began to be afflicted with stomach trouble, also diarrhea," writes Mr. Wm. Walters, of Antrim, Mo. "In warm weather it grew worse, until it would throw me into a cramping chill. Was troubled so often that I sometimes thought my end had come. Tried many remedies, but they gave only temporary relief. In November, 1899, thought I would try Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I got six bottles and took five in succession, then thought I would wait for a time and take the one left. Soon found I had symptoms of the trouble coming back, so took the sixth bottle and it cured me. I have enjoyed the best of health this summer, and the credit all belongs to your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I can't express my many thanks to Dr. Pierce for his remedy, for it did so much for me. Words cannot express how severely I suffered.

"If any doubt the above statement let them address me, and I will take great pleasure in answering."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

A SMOOTH YOUNG SKIN.

The Method by Which One Woman Preserves Her Complexion.

A professional model whose complexion is of the classic type has this to say about her smooth skin and its treatment:

"I suppose I ought to say that I owe my complexion to soap and water; but, to tell the actual truth, neither soap nor water agrees with my skin very well. I seldom wash my face, vulgar as this may sound.

"I am accustomed to taking a cold bath every day, which is a matter of habit. It is good for some people and bad for others, but it agrees perfectly with me. I feel invigorated by it.

"In the natural course of events my face gets its dash of cold water, but otherwise I do not wash it except for a light steaming which it gets once in awhile, say once in ten days or so.

"At night I cover my face thickly with cold cream. I put it on in great haste. I let it remain on for a few minutes and then remove it with a soft cloth. I then apply another thick coating of cold cream, and this I leave on all night. It seems to sink into the pores and to supply the moisture which has been taken out of it during the day.

"You cannot expect to have a smooth young skin unless you use lots of cold cream on your face. You must experiment until you find the right kind of cold cream to use. If glycerin hurts your skin, do not use it. If you cannot stand rose water and alcohol, why, it is best to omit them. Discover the kind of cream you can use and stick to it. That is the way I did."—Brooklyn Eagle.

WOMEN ARCHITECTS.

Why They Are Better Adapted to the Work Than Men.

In America we are on the highroad to perfection in domestic architecture owing, possibly, to the acknowledged supremacy of our women. Where a woman reigns supreme it is the end and aim of her men to make her comfortable and happy. Now the American architect, being a man and belonging most likely to some woman, makes it his pride to provide for her—or her sex which she represents—the most comfortable, convenient and pretty house to adorn with her taste and her presence until she moves.

A woman is not wasteful in small things, but a man is. Who, then, is so adapted to utilize the small space which constitutes the average house? A house can be the visible expression of her cleverness, her economy, her taste and her common sense. It will give her an opportunity to be great in the minor aspirations.

When she builds a house she will put herself in the place of that other woman whose destiny it is to live there. She will warm that house comfortably because she herself hates to shiver. She will put in plenty of cupboards because without cupboards life is not worth living—to a woman. Her kitchen will be in just proportion to the size of the house and not a kind of baronial hall in which even the beetles look lonely.—Mrs. John Lane in London Outlook.

A Browning Letter.

One of Browning's letters is a reply to a young poet who wrote asking Browning's advice about publishing a volume of poems. The reply, in part, is as follows and may serve a useful purpose to young poets of today as well: "It sounds strange and almost sad to me that I should be imagined of authority in this kind, I who for years could not get a line printed except at my own expense, and I began half a century ago or more."

The Borgia Bronze

By ROBERT C. V. MEYERS

Copyright, 1904, by Robert C. V. Meyers

THE week before starting for his usual Mediterranean sail Hartley took from the little gold inlaid desk in his wife's boudoir the letter of instructions. There had been a look of haunting sorrow in Elise's face the day she gave him the letter, and, as though reproaching herself for something, she urged his head down to her pillow and let his cheek rest close to hers for a moment before dismissing him.

When he left the room, her mother followed him.

"Elise has such strong individuality," said Mrs. Dale. "Her wishing to return to the original donors the pretty things she has had given her from time to time is just like her; it is the same as telling her friends that their gifts were precious to her and that it would seem almost sacrilegious for any one else to enjoy them after she is gone."

Hartley knew that the lady desired him to think that his wife put no intentional slight upon him in sending away from him her prized possessions.

But he had known the truth all along, ever since the day Elise accepted him, and he came upon her an hour after her word had been given him with an old bronze jar and Caldwell's letter in her lap. She was very white as she handed him the sheet, whereon he read the aspiring words of his rival. He gave her back the letter, looking into her eyes, and she threw it away from her, laughing lightly. Then he held out to her the case of shining adornments which he had been collecting for the day when she should have promised to be his wife, for he had never doubted that she would be his. A month later she married him.

He looked down at the letter of instructions spread out upon her dainty desk.

"The jewels my husband gave me," he read, "are to revert to him."

He smiled. Yesterday he had handed the baubles to her sister and been effusively thanked.

"So like you," Mrs. Dale said, "to wish Marguerite to have them. You know how dearly Elise appreciated them and how sweet it was of her to wish you to have them again. They were too valuable for her to dispose of otherwise. Besides, she loved you so."

The letter of instructions went on mentioning article after article, each to go back to the presenter of it, her wedding gifts and all, nothing to come to him but the jewels he gave her the day she consented to marry him.

"I purchased with a price," he said. "I gained a faithfulness up to the value I placed upon it, and she honored the name I gave her. There is nothing to complain about." And Caldwell's name was not among the others. How well she had guarded her poor secret, even speaking of the man as he forfeited the respect of his friends with a sort of pitying contempt which she must have tried to make believe was genuine.

No, Caldwell's name was not mentioned in the letter of instructions, and yet Caldwell had once given her a present.

He left the desk and, going to a cabinet in a corner, brought forth a low, squat vase of bronze.

Elise had told him the history of the bronze. It was called a poison jar. Caldwell had given it to her in Rome. It was said to have come from a Borgia collection, probably had been known to Lucrezia of that remarkable house.

Hartley fingered the dull, sinister looking thing, whose green and black blotches, etched by time, had engaged the connoisseurs of artists whom Elise had to the house. He turned it upside down, and manipulated the base, lightly pressing his finger nail round it a score of times, till it slowly revolved and disclosed a little compartment, the existence of which few would suspect.

Out of this compartment Elise had abstracted Caldwell's letter of love that time he came upon her with the object of travels in his hand an hour after she had said she would be his wife.

The place was vacant now—nothing there but a continuation of the canker that seared the outside.

What a romantic fellow Caldwell must have been! Quite an old time Elizabethan lover who feared his fate too much.

Why had Elise kept the bronze all this time? She had an artistic eye and admired its coloring.

Besides, had she not been wise in having no desire to revive old memories in Caldwell by sending the thing back to him?

There was one other thing she could have given back to Caldwell.

Hartley felt in his pocket and took out a paper folded and refolded till it was but an inch square. He fitted it in the compartment in the base of the bronze. It wedged in like a part of the metal. He had found it in a locket they took from his wife's neck when she was dead, a simple piece of jewelry her father had given her as a child and which she always wore in remembrance of him, for she had loved him. He had opened it and found the paper pressed over the portrait of her father.

He took the paper from the bronze jar. Ought it to have been buried with her, as was done with the locket? No; she had been his wife, and this was a love letter from another man.

Rather had she been cruel or kind to Caldwell or himself in showing the letter that time to her affianced husband, though could she have done otherwise when that accepted husband chanced upon her with the letter not yet hidden from him? And was he doing a loyal or kind thing to her in reading it a second time? There were hard lines about his mouth as his eyes scanned the hastily scrawled words: "I am poor, but you, too, are poor. Why must wealth be such a power and love be so defenseless? I love you as no man ever loved before. I will work for you, slave for you"—

He folded it again. Why had Elise kept it? And what a crazy idiot Caldwell must be to take a jilting as he had done, and scarcely a jilting either, for Elise had answered him not a word (he would swear to that, for he knew Elise's honor), only accepting another man who spoke first. And Caldwell had gone down. What a wreck the man was, avoided by one time intimates, debasing his talents, welcoming the maddest excitement at no matter what cost to fame and conscience! And yet one friend remained to him, old Senator Nicholson, the friend of the president, the early chum of his father. Old Nicholson held out, offering his hand when others stood aloof. Only two days ago the papers announced the gaining of a consulship by Nicholson for Caldwell, which might yet save him and re-establish him in the good opinion of the world. And Caldwell had boasted at the club that he ignored the appointment. Could love do so much to debase a man?

Caldwell had been loved by Elise. The man had been weak enough to let himself sink because he thought his feeling had not been reciprocated by her.

"But am I strong enough to let another man know how little I was prized? And yet"—

If Caldwell were set on his feet again and accepted the consulship!

"But Elise does not mention his name in the letter of instructions. Did not her feeling for him wear away when she discovered how weak he was? Still she kept his letter, and it is the province of a woman to elevate what she loves. What she loves!"

Suddenly he wheeled toward the gold inlaid desk and let down the lid. He could not write the letter at Elise's desk.

He took the bronze jar and left the rosy room, locking the door behind him, and passed on to the library. There he threw the curtains wide, letting in the sunshine, and, seating himself in his accustomed chair, wrote and addressed a few lines to Caldwell.

Caldwell was at the club when the note was handed to him. He was at his worst.

He opened Hartley's note. He burst into a strident laugh. Mrs. Hartley wished to return to the original donors all the gifts with which they had honored her, and, among others, his old time remembrance had been noticed. That jar! He recollected the day in Rome, the lying old descendant of the Caesars who sold the thing to him. Elise had admired it in the little black shop window, its shape and its color. They had passed on to the great cathedral, where Mrs. Dale awaited them and dismissed him. He had hurried back to the little shop to buy the bronze, which the old fellow lovingly displayed to him, vouching for its antiquity and showing him the hollow in the base. It seemed that a great chance opened to him. Mrs. Dale's treatment of him in the cathedral told him that her daughter would see him no more alone. Elise had besought him to send her no more letters, which her mother insisted upon opening. Hartley had arrived and been welcomed by Mrs. Dale. He bought the jar and in the hollow wedged his letter of adoration, fearful, yet hopeful. He sent the bronze to Elise, was assured that it was placed in her hand and never heard a word from her. The next month she was married to Hartley.

So Elise would have him receive his gift back? That told him even at this late day how little she had ever cared for him, how false she had been from the first. She had kept the jar, undesirous of holding any communication with him by sending it back to him, and Hartley knew of the thing and would return it now. Curse the man! He should have nothing that had once been his. He would go for the bronze. He was at once

In half an hour he was on the way to Elise's former home. Hartley received him in the library.

Caldwell's head was high, his bloodshot eyes like those of an animal at bay. He noted Hartley's lack of funereal garb and thought how little the man had cared for his wife, for he looked well, positively calm and easy, and she had not been dead a month.

There were few words between them.

"I owed it to the nature of your note," Caldwell said, "to answer it at once and in this way."

He knew his speech was weak and that it so impressed the other.

Hartley nodded and pointed to the little jar on the table. At that moment he could have struck the man down, the marks of dissipation on him were such a blur on Elise's memory. Call that love? Love should ennoble, not debase.

Yet Elise might save this man. He owed it to the love he bore the memory of his wife that Caldwell should not blame her further.

"That is yours, I believe," he said, again indicating the bronze. Caldwell was searching in his mind for words for the widower.

"You have," he said stiltedly, "sustained a great loss."

Hartley's face reddened, but, "Loss is common," he said quietly enough.

"Yes," quickly followed up Caldwell, "'never morning wore to evening but some heart did break,' the poet says."

It pleased him to be vulgarly flippant, to make the cold man in front of him wince.

"It takes a good deal to break a heart," returned Hartley, and Caldwell smiled at the stab, as he thought it.

"Your wife," he said, "suffered little, I hope."

"Her physicians so assured me," answered Hartley.

A little silence ensued, which neither seemed willing to break. At length Caldwell spoke.

"Shall you take your yacht across this summer?" he asked.

"I do so every year," was the response.

"I fancied," Caldwell said, "that the loss you have had"—

"Might change my plans?" interrupted Hartley. "I sail next week. And now I shall thank you for coming in person in response to my note concerning Mrs. Hartley's letter of instructions. Shall I send the bronze to you?"

HARTLEY'S HAND CLOSED.

"On second thought," said Caldwell, "I believe I will not take it. I care very little for it, and—that is, you may make whatever disposition of it you please."

The wretchedness of the speech struck Hartley. Had the man cared anything for Elise, after all? If he had not, then not for the world should he have the bronze.

But Caldwell's eyes were on the little jar. His mind swung back to the old days in Rome, Elise by his side. Again he was bartering with the shopkeeper for the jar, saw the little aperture where poison was said to have been once concealed, and in that aperture he had crushed his wild declaration of love.

"No," he said; "I will take it," and placed his hand on it.

But Hartley's hand closed over his hotly. For a moment the men looked fiercely into each other's eyes.

"Elise!" Hartley's lips murmured mutely; "Elise!" And his fingers relaxed. Caldwell caught up the bronze.

"I hope," he said, "your usual trip abroad will hold its usual distractions." And he was gone, leaving Hartley in his chair, his gaze fastened on the spot where the bronze had rested.

His face was white and drawn. His fingers tightly clutched the arms of the chair.

"Elise!" he murmured; "Elise!"

Caldwell went along the streets in wildest humor. He had been to the man Elise had chosen in his stead. He had his revenge. Elise's husband had never cared for her, and she had been a woman who craved love.

He tossed the bronze from hand to hand. He would further humiliate her memory. He would give the silly jar to some besotted passerby, some humble, poverty stricken soul who would at once dispose of the thing for a few cents with which to buy liquid warmth and wealth. But he reached the club before doing so. He got into an untenanted alcove in the reading room and set the jar before him on the table. Only a little while ago! And this was the end! Oh, those days in Rome! Those days in Rome!

"And what a fool I was!" He took up the bronze.

"How did old Ananias say was the way to get at the secret?"

He fingered the base of the jar.

"'Loss is common,'" he laughed. "'Never morning wore to evening but some heart did break.'"

And old Nicholson! He would write at once, declining the consular appointment.

See, here was the almost imperceptible threadlike groove in the bottom of the jar! You ran your finger nail lightly round it till you heard a faint click.

Could it be possible the old dago had told the truth and that this thing had been a poison jar?

Poison! Love was a poison, insidious, deadly.

He heard a faint click. The base of the bronze in his hand slowly revolved till it hinged round and showed the interior of the false bottom.

He gasped. A paper folded and folded till it was an inch square lay there. He dared not touch it.

He trembled from head to foot. Elise's voice was in his ears. He saw her face. Suddenly he reached and drew out the paper. He cried out and tore at it and spread it open.

It was his old declaration of love.

He gazed at it for a moment; then crushed it to his heart.

Had she never found it—never guessed at it?

No, she had never discovered the secret wealth, her mother was anxious for the match, Elise had thought, he was the sport of the poorer man—she had treasured this little bronze, the one gift he had ever offered her. She never knew; she had loved him, she had loved him. And, oh, to reclaim himself for sake of her love and his! For she loved him, she loved him, she loved him!

And he, too, murmured her name: "Elise!"

HOW TO PUNISH A CHILD.

Means by Which You May Cause Him Profound Remorse.

Have you ever given a child the privilege of choosing his own punishment—either a whipping or the deprivation of some beloved treat, solitude in his chamber or some other form, and had him prefer the whipping, "to have it over with?" Doesn't this prove it to be the lesser punishment, something to be borne with stoically, as a necessary evil, perhaps, but forgotten the next moment in some pleasure or recreation?

If, however, upon mature deliberation it seems expedient to apply the rod, let it, by all the regard you have for your child's self respect, be done in the privacy of his own room and not even hinted at before other children. There seems to be a strain of cruelty in the makeup of some children that delights in another's punishment. If a child must be punished in this way, if every other expedient has been tried and found wanting and it seems that he will learn the desired lesson in no other way—for let it be understood that punishment is given for no other reason than reform—then shut him up in one room and yourself in another until your anger has had time to cool and he to reflect. Then, with calm face, a prayerful and sorry heart and a dignified demeanor, go to him and do the job thoroughly and well.

Keep him closeted until the fierceness of his emotion has worn away. Then take him out, bathe and clothe him afresh and keep him with you. Talk to him, not about his offense; you have punished him for that. Let it drop. Cheerfully expect it not to happen again. Be kind and loving to him and prove by your actions that he has grieved you.—Good Housekeeping.

CHILDREN FED TO MOLOCH

Dr. Felix Adler Thus Characterizes the Labor of Children.

Humanitarians as well as materialists have raised their voices in protest against the laws that permit the traffic in children's strength at the expense, not merely of the child, but of the community.

Collier's Weekly voices this protest and makes incidental comment upon conditions in Pennsylvania in the following editorial:

Child labor in England began when modern machinery brought a demand for cheap operatives. Then, as Dr. Felix Adler has said, somebody had the idea of shoveling all the unowned and unloved children into factories. "Children were fed to machines as literally as in ancient idolatry they were fed to Moloch." They worked for fourteen hours a day and rotted by the thousand. A parliamentary inquiry showed the case of a seven-year-old boy whose father used to wake him before daybreak, carry him to the mill and leave him there to tend a machine for sixteen hours a day. Women crawled through two-foot galleries on their hands and knees, dragging by a long chain attached to a leather belt a cart holding three hundred or four hundred pounds of coal. "How is it," asked the strong Jewish thinker, "that human beings are capable of such brutality?" Why is it that in England, an Anglo-Saxon country, where woman is supposed to be a kind of goddess, the womanhood was crushed out of little girls and grown women groveled and dragged carts?" Two years ago there were 20,000 children under twelve years of age at work in our southern states. Pennsylvania has 35,000 under sixteen, the greater number of them under twelve. Elizabeth Barrett Browning once asked of England, "How long, oh cruel nation, will you trample on a child's heart?" "This," says Dr. Adler, "is not Russia. What do you think of our own czars of industry?"

The Big Centre County Fair.

In four weeks from now we will be on the eve of the Big Centre County Fair, which this year has every promise of being bigger and better than ever before. There has has been no flood this year to cause wash-outs, consequently the grounds are in better condition now than ever before, while the track, always splendid, is in first-class shape for good time. We already have called attention to a number of new and novel features which this year will be established by the management, all of which will be in addition to all the other interesting features of former years.

Of course the racing is always one of the most interesting as well as absorbing parts of the Big Fair. The events listed for this year include, for Wednesday, a 2:17 class with a purse of $300 attached, and a 2:25 class, purse $250, Thursday's racing will be in the 2:35 and 2:20 classes, with purses of $250 each; while on Friday there will be the 2.27 class, purse $250, and the great free-for-all, purse $300. These are the standard races scheduled, while the out-look now is more than ever favorable for a well-filled county race, to be made up of horses from out in the country and not to include horses from either Bellefonte or Philipsburg. Already the outlook for a big string of horses and a fast field is very bright.

Of course the exhibit of agricultural products, stock, etc., will be no small one by any means. More people throughout the county are becoming interested with each succeeding year and already lots of farmers are preparing their best grain and fruit and stock for exhibition at the fair. This is a department in which every farmer in Centre county should be represented. Though you may not realize it now, it will do you good in the end.

Of course in the amusement line the management promises that this year's gathering shall be plentifully supplied with clean and harmless diversions; amusements that will entertain as well as amuse you. So that all in the Big Fair, October 3rd to 6th, is a date we can all look forward to with great anticipations for a glorious good time. See that you make your arrangements that you can attend and bring all your family with you.

Farm Fences.

Perhaps no better treatise upon fences can be given than a farmer's reason for seeking a different fence than those already in use. Every year upon my farm I usually divided one or more grass fields, so as to mow one portion and pasture the other, or to keep different kinds of stock by themselves, which I consider desirable, especially in the case of milch cows and sheep. I found it a great job to move the necessary amount of rail fence to accomplish the desired purpose, and when built such temporary fenses were blown down in places by every heavy wind that came; stock, especially horses, were constantly knocking it down, colts finding it one of the finest of pastimes to see how many rails they could knock down daily, till there was no rest for the weary old farmer from rebuilding; hence he thought in his weariness, cannot this be changed? Cannot some device be made that can be moved with ease, that will not blow down, that colts will let alone, that is a good sheep and hog fence? Such a fence must be as high as possible, therefore let us use all the wire we can, form a bridge to keep it tight, put the wire at the top so that the wind will not blow it down or cattle press it over, with boards at the bottom to form the bridge, also to make a fence against sheep and hogs. It must be made in lengths so that it can be moved apart at a time (14 feet proves the best length); we want it straight, so let us couple it together end to end. The coupler must allow the fence to follow the uneven surface of the ground; the upper couplers will spread going over a hill, the lower through a hollow, hence it will leave no hog holes under the fence. This coupler make the best point from which to support the lengths. What shall I anchor it with, was the next question. An iron rod can be driven easily; being of uniform size it can be drawn easily also. If I use a large stiff rod, when I draw the top over the one way the bottom will move in the opposite direction. This will not do; the rod must be as light as may be and support the fence, the lower end of the rod will not move, hence the post when drawn over will again assume its upright position.—Albert Ewer, in Mich. Farmer.
